

A NOTE FOR BLADDER CANCER PROVIDERS

Do your bladder cancer patients ever get to ring the bell?

Most cancer patients ring a bell when treatment ends. Bladder cancer often does not work that way. As you know, patients live through rounds of treatment and years of scopes, and then the waiting. The finish line keeps moving, so a lot of them never get the bell moment everyone talks about.

A personal Resilience Bell changes that. Your patient takes one home and rings it for every win. A clear scope. A hard day they got through. Every win counts.

Why a take-home bell matters here

- Bladder cancer comes back more often than most cancers. These patients need encouragement for the long road, not one finish line they may never reach.
- A bell at home turns a long, draining process into small wins your patient can mark and celebrate on their own terms.
- Encourage them to bring their bell to appointments and ring it with you. Your team gets to share in the joy and the celebration.
- It takes one moment to hand a bell over. Your patient remembers who gave it to them, and so do their families.
- They can submit their photo or video to our Ring of Resilience page to join their community of warriors.

Kristian Pino with his partner and caregiver Steven Kuchler.
Kristian is currently in treatment for Bladder cancer.

Sponsor a box of Resilience Bells for your patients

Ready to give the day they arrive.

STARTER BOX 50 bells $250

IMPACT BOX 100 bells $500

- ✓ Keep a box at your clinic and hand bells to patients during treatment or at follow-ups.
- ✓ Every bell shows the bladder cancer ribbon and the words "Every Win Counts."
- ✓ Kristian and Steven decorate each one. We ship them to you ready to give.

PAY IT FORWARD

Part of every box helps us send bells to bladder cancer patients who find us on their own, with no clinic behind them. Your box reaches past your waiting room.

I am Michelle Reed, an 8-year chronic bladder cancer survivor and founder of Bless Your Vibes Cancer Support Studio. I know what it feels like to never get a finish line. Let's give your patients hope and something to ring for.

Ready to bring bells to your patients?

Email: blessyourvibes@gmail.com

Call or text: 470-285-1776

Order online: ResilienceBell.com